Jane: Aloo. ICT? Sijuyi Functions, uses. Just too much!

Paul: No ICT is this phone you are calling me with.

Jane: Sure??

Paul: Yes J. Even that smart TV and radio I saw when I visited you the other day are ICTs.

Jane: Me I don't watch TV but I love mum's phone. But why do we study things we already have in our homes!!!!

Paul: Eeeem. We study them to know more about them. At times they are even misused.

Jane: Then how about Functions and Uses.

Paul: Functions are got from their key components like input devices, processing devices, storage devices and output devices.

Jane: What do you mean man?

Paul: What I mean is that ICTs have got four key functions. That is; they input data, process data, store data, and, they output data.

Jane: Then uses????!!!!

Paul: Man. Whereas the functions are four, ICTs can be used for many things like entertainment, communication, security, research, transport, weather forecasts, teaching and learning, etc. You remember when the teacher brings his laptop and a projector to teach us in his math lessons??

Jane: Yes man

Paul: You remember the projector and laptop teacher Kato uses in the Math lessons?? They are examples of ICTs being used in teaching and learning.

Jane: So when I use mum's phone to watch some videos it means that I am using an ICT to entertain myself??

Paul: Very clear Jane.

Jane: Then this ICT can be done man. So you are going to be helping me with ICT.

Paul: No problem, but Uncle is back. Bye bye J.
